Lo duca e io per quel cammino ascoso
intrammo a ritornar nel chiaro mondo;
e sanza cura aver d'alcun riposo,
salimmo sù, el primo e io secondo, tanto ch'i' vidi de le cose belle che porta 'l ciel, per un pertugio tondo.
E quindi uscimmo a riveder le stelle.

Dante, Divine Comedy, Inferno, Canto 34.133–139

“The beauty of the universe consists not only of unity in variety, but also of variety in unity”

Acknowledgments

This book represents a reworked, updated, and augmented version of my doctoral dissertation, submitted originally to the Department of Near and Middle Eastern Civilizations of the University of Toronto, and accepted officially in 2019. For that, I again wish to offer my sincere thanks to my dissertation advisor, Katja Goebs, and to the members of my dissertation committee, Ronald J. Leprohon and Mary-Ann Pouls Wegner, as well as to Enrico Raffaelli and Joshua A. Roberson, who served as additional reader and external examiner, respectively. I am particularly indebted to Joshua A. Roberson for his invitation to publish the present monograph in the series Material and Visual Culture of Ancient Egypt, through Lockwood Press, and to Billie Jean Collins, the director of Lockwood Press. I would also like to express my gratitude to all members of the Department of Near and Middle Eastern Civilizations of the University of Toronto for the assistance they have provided during my years as a doctoral student. In particular, Anna Sousa always offered me her unwavering support and friendship and helped me push through the hardest times, and for this I will be forever grateful.

With regard to the current volume, I wish to extend my thanks to the following scholars for providing me with (un)published material to include in my study and/or for granting me permission to reproduce a number of images: James P. Allen, Marilina Betrò, John C. Darnell and Colleen M. Manassa Darnell, Andreas Dorn, Christian Leitz and Daniela Mendel Leitz, Alexandra von Lieven, Joshua A. Roberson, Foy D. Scalf, and Alberto Urcia. I am moreover grateful to the Egypt Exploration Society, the Institut Français d'Archéologie Orientale, the Natacha Rambova Archive of Yale University, and the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The present work has benefited greatly from discussions with several other people in the field of Egyptology and beyond, who offered me their assistance on a number of matters—scholarly and otherwise. For this, I am indebted particularly to M. Victoria Almansa-Villatoro, Myrto Aloumpi, Heather D. Baker, Odette Boivin, Benjamin Cartlidge, Mark Collier, Roland Enmarch, Marina Escolano-Poveda, Christina Geisen, Glenn Godenho, Rita Lucarelli, Elaine Sanderson, and Daniel A. Werning.

Since the completion of my dissertation, my academic life has brought me back across the pond once again, to the University of Liverpool. I would like to acknowledge the Department of Archaeology, Classics, and Egyptology, which has provided a friendly environment for taking this project through its final stages, and to thank my colleagues—in particular the Egyptology team—for welcoming me into the department and for their support in navigating the insidious waters of a new teaching system in a new country. A special thanks goes to the Head of Department, Bruce Gibson, for his continued support and his formidable leadership in the most difficult of times. Moreover, the pandemic world in which we have been living of late has shaped this work in unexpected ways. While I write this, I am reminded that, despite the unprecedented circumstances, I have been lucky enough to have crossed paths with many wonderful people in academia and beyond, who have contributed to making my research possible. The global academic community has come to my rescue countless times, and I therefore wish to express my sincere gratitude to all those who helped me see this through, one way or another.

I could not fail to mention the invaluable support and encouragement of my family and my friends around the world. Regrettably, I cannot name everyone, but I shall cite a few, who stand in for all the others for their friendship over the years: Odette Boivin, Nicoletta Fagni, Christina Geisen, Aleksandra Ksiežak, Eric Liang, Paolo Marini, Manuel Rossi, Christopher Schoene, Angela Ulacco, and Emanuela Zampieri. To all friends, close and far, whom I could not mention, but whom I have in my heart: thank you!

The final, biggest, and most heartfelt thanks go to the most important people in my life. I could not have done this without my partner Gianluca, who always stood by me with his unfaltering love and assistance and his never-ending confidence in my abilities, who kept me going even during the toughest of times, and who bravely weathered countless discussions of what must have seemed the strangest aspects of the (after)world imagined by the Egyptians. Finally, to my parents, who have invariably supported me in the pursuit of my studies and encouraged my academic aspirations with incredible patience and enthusiasm. Even though sometimes puzzled by my bizarre choices, they were nevertheless always there with their love and guidance, helping steer my journey through good and hard times. None of this would have been possible without them, and it is to them that I therefore dedicate this book.

Chronology

The following chronological table is based on Ian Shaw, ed., The Oxford History of Ancient Egypt, new ed. (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003), which will be implied henceforth whenever dates are provided, unless otherwise noted. Details of regnal years are provided only when they are relevant for the present study, starting with the Fifth Dynasty, when the Pyramid Texts appeared, and ending with the demise of the New Kingdom. Dates are omitted whenever a great deal of uncertainty is involved, as is the case for the (mostly) ephemeral kings of the so-called Intermediate periods, for instance.
